Recognition underscores DFIN's employee-driven culture of collaboration, growth, and shared success

NEW YORK, Nov. 13, 2026 /PRNewswire/ -- Donnelley Financial Solutions (NYSE: DFIN), a leading global provider of financial regulatory and compliance solutions and the top SEC filing agent, today announced it has been named the #1 Technology Company on Best Practice Institute's (BPI) Most Loved Workplaces® by Industry list. The recognition comes as DFIN continues its evolution as a software company, with more than 50% of revenue now generated from software sales and reflects the employee-driven culture helping power that transformation and strengthen how DFIN supports its clients.

The distinction adds to a year of significant workplace recognition for DFIN. The company also ranks #13 on America's Most Loved Workplaces®, a list featured in The Wall Street Journal, moving up 32 positions from #45 last year. Earlier this year, DFIN was also named the #1 Most Loved Workplace on the 2026 Global 100 Most Loved Workplaces®, published in The Economist.

"Being recognized first in Technology is especially meaningful as it reflects both the experiences of our people and the progress of our transformation," said Kirk Williams, Chief People and International Officer at DFIN. "As DFIN has evolved into a software company, with more than 50% of revenue now coming from software sales, our employees have been central to that success. By creating an environment where people can grow, contribute and do their best work, we are accelerating our journey and delivering even greater value to our clients."

The recognition reinforces DFIN's continued focus on building a workplace where employees feel connected to the company's purpose, confident in its future and empowered to make an impact.

"Our culture is a competitive advantage, shaping how we show up for our clients every day," said Dan Leib, President and Chief Executive Officer of DFIN. "When our people feel supported, connected and empowered to succeed, they bring that same commitment to helping our clients navigate their most important business moments with confidence."

DFIN's latest recognition builds on five years of Most Loved Workplace® recognition and reflects the company's continued investment in employee development, collaboration, innovation and inclusion.
