

EA's 2010 FIFA World Cup South Africa(TM) in Stores Now Throughout North America

Eight New Coca-Cola Goal Celebrations and Classic 11 Team Available to Unlock

REDWOOD CITY, Calif., Apr 27, 2010 (BUSINESS WIRE) -- The chance for everyone to win the 2010 FIFA World Cup(TM) became a reality today after Electronic Arts (NASDAQ:ERTS) announced that EA SPORTS(TM) 2010 FIFA World Cup South Africa(TM) is in stores now throughout North America with eight new celebrations for the PlayStation(R)3 computer entertainment system and Xbox 360(R) videogame and entertainment system. It will be available throughout Asia and Europe beginning April 30, 2010 in anticipation of the real-world tournament which begins in June. The videogame is also available on Wii(TM), PSP(R) (PlayStation(R) Portable), iPod(R) touch and iPhone(R).

The 2010 FIFA World Cup South Africa videogame will feature all the emotion and passion of the fiercest national rivalries battling on the world's biggest stage, with all 199 national teams that took part in qualification and all 10 official stadiums to be used in South Africa. Gamers will be able to play as their home nation from qualification right through to a virtual reproduction of the FIFA World Cup Final(TM) and feel what it is like to score the goal that lifts a nation.

Fans can unlock the new celebrations through EA SPORTS and Coca-Cola(TM) channels in participating countries. After unlocking each celebration, fans can score a goal, use the controller to activate the celebrations and admire the performance via a new dynamic camera angle that delivers the emotion of each goal scored. Consumers can also admire their celebration and share with fans online by uploading to EA SPORTS Football World (www.EASPORTSfootball.com).

In addition, to honor the legacy of the FIFA World Cup(TM), EA SPORTS unveiled its Classic 11 team that features 35 legendary players from past tournaments, including star striker Roger Milla of Cameroon, who scored four goals in the 1990 FIFA World Cup and in 1994, at the age of 42, became the oldest player to play in the tournament. Fans who carry the hopes and dreams of a nation into battle against fans from rival countries and win the 2010 FIFA World CupTM will unlock the Classic 11 squad.

New players to the FIFA Soccer franchise can also compete for the 2010 FIFA World Cup utilizing new Two-Button controls designed to enable new gamers to pass and shoot with an accessible control scheme that utilizes just two buttons.
