

Woodward Publishes Its 2025 Sustainability Report Highlighting Progress in Environmental Stewardship, Social Responsibility, and Governance

2026-07-08

FORT COLLINS, Colo., July 08, 2026 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Woodward (NASDAQ: WWD), a global leader in aerospace and industrial controls, today announced the publication of its 2025 Sustainability Report, which highlights the company's ongoing progress in environmental stewardship, social responsibility, and governance.

The report outlines the company's approach to creating long-term value through operational excellence and global teams focused on the company's purpose to design and deliver energy control solutions our partners count on to power a clean future.

Among the highlights from the 2025 report:

- Enhanced environmental disclosures, including full Scope 1 and Scope 2 greenhouse gas emissions, energy intensity, and water withdrawal across our global operations
- Continued implementation of Human and Organizational Performance (HOP) at Woodward locations around the world
- Continued investment in members through nearly 18,000 hours of training, and ranking in the top quartile for employee engagement among manufacturing companies
- Development of our community engagement and volunteerism program, Fueling Futures, which is the focused approach we take to our philanthropy efforts within the United States
- An outline of Woodward's first formal double materiality assessment

"Woodward operates with integrity and determination to have a positive impact on our world, with a clear focus on delivering value for all our stakeholders, including our customers, shareholders, members, and communities," said Chip Blankenship, Woodward's Chairman and CEO. "The progress reflected in our 2025 Sustainability Report is evidence of our team's dedication to fulfilling our purpose, while keeping our core values of integrity, respectful and accountable, and humble and driven, as our guide in everything we do."
