Gender Based Violence & Harassment

Gender based violence and harassment (GBVH), is a function of gender inequality.

It takes the form of actions that result in physical, sexual and psychological harm or suffering to women and children, or an affront to their human dignity, including threats of such acts, coercion or arbitrary deprivation of liberty, whether occurring in public or private life.

Though gender-based violence and harassment can affect both men and women it is most often perpetrated by men against women and girls. This bias towards 'gender based' violence is widespread and is rooted in gender equality and unequal power relations, thus making women and girls especially vulnerable to violence and harassment. These unequal power relations within certain cultures and societies can often prevent women from reporting cases.

Gendered aspects of violence including:

1. Violence against a woman because she is a woman
2. Violence directed against a woman that affects women disproportionately due to (a) High concentration of women workers in risky production departments and (b) Gendered barriers to seeking relief.

What are the five main types of gender-based violence?

- Physical violence
- Verbal violence (including hate speech)
- Psychological violence.
- Sexual violence.
- Socio-economic violence.
